

Florida Luxury Senior Living

As Seen In... Forbes, January 21, 2013

THE INSPIRED LIFE AT ALLEGRO

Senior Living Combines the Comforts of Home With the Amenities of a Fine Boutique Hotel

It was a momentous day at Allegro's newest senior living community, in Jupiter, Fla. After more than two years of planning and construction, the first resident was moving in.

"Seventeen of our department heads and other employees gathered in the lobby to greet her," recalls Richard Miller, executive vice president and principal for Allegro Senior Living. "They even toasted her with champagne and orange juice. It was our trademark welcome-to-your-new-home and how-can-we-help-you attitude that starts on day one at every Allegro community."

With the opening of Allegro in Jupiter, Fla., in September 2012, Allegro offers luxury senior living at seven communities in Florida and one in Kentucky. Each one is carefully designed to help residents age in place seamlessly. The exquisite Allegro community in Stuart, Fla., which opened in March 2011, won the 2012 ALFA (Assisted Living Federation of America) Senior Living by Design Citation Award. The Jupiter and Stuart communities both offer independent living, assisted living and memory care.

"Our senior living communities combine all the comforts of home with the personalized services and amenities of a fine boutique hotel," Miller says. "Residents enjoy an exciting lifestyle, lots of opportunities to socialize, and a constant stream of activities to participate in – or not. We do everything possible to help our residents live life on their terms, and to provide something different for them to look forward to every day."

Easing the Way

Allegro understands that moving into senior living is a major life transition, one that can be challenging both logistically and psychologically. "Everyone here is experienced in making the transition as smooth and easy as possible – whether the resident is coming from another retirement community or their own home," Miller says.

The company has alliances with local firms that specialize in helping people pare down their belongings in preparation for a move into a smaller living space. "They help our seniors make those difficult decisions about what to take with them and what to leave behind," Miller says. "Then, once they're here, we make the moving-in process as efficient as we can, and we answer any questions and address any concerns in a timely manner. I just got an email from a new resident at Jupiter wanting to know who to write to about how wonderful the transition experience was from his previous home to Allegro."

Ultimately, it's all about doing "everything reasonable" to ensure residents' well-being and happiness. "That's the primary reason we're all doing what we're doing," Miller says. "That's the reason we're here."

"I just got an email from a new resident at Jupiter wanting to know who to write to about how wonderful the transition experience was from his previous home to Allegro."

– Richard Miller

Challenge the mind, refresh the body:

Allegro residents live life on their own terms, enjoying a world of possibilities for enhancing, embracing and delighting in each day. Inspired Living at Allegro offers a myriad of choices that support health and well-being, including fitness and wellness classes for every ability level, activities to challenge the mind and promote a high level of brain fitness, and a variety of engaging social opportunities.

Good friends, good food: Fine dining is an Allegro hallmark, and every chef-prepared meal is an occasion to celebrate. Residents enjoy restaurant-style dining at breakfast, lunch and dinner, with a range of menu options to suit every taste preference and dietary need. Flexible, all-day dining is available to suit residents' busy lifestyle.

Boynton Beach* | Fleming Island | Jupiter | St. Augustine
St. Petersburg | Stuart | Tallahassee | Tarpon Springs
www.allegroliving.com

*Opening in 2014